

ABSTRACT

An interface module is used for carrying out transaction-based electronic commerce. The interface module is connected between a terminal and a data network, such as the Internet. Also provided is a module for displaying and monitoring the flow of useful data to and from the terminal, the display module accessing document templates to allow the useful data transmitted to be displayed as documents.